Mr. Coatesworth showed the witness another letter written from New York by Pennell and addressed to Mrs. Burdick. She said it was his handwriting, but she did not remember having received it.
"I will read it and see if it will refresh your recollection: As I looked into your beautiful eyes last night I feared there was some trouble hidden there. I was not know, but I feared it was because of some other reason than because I was going away. If there was, dearest, I wish you would tell. There is that in the manner of your husband toward you that makes me fear sometimes that I might kill him. Do you remember seeing that letter?"

Afrs. Burdick said she did not know hether her husband was aware of the act that she was receiving letters from Fennell. Her habit had been to keep her etters locked in a box. Her husband first tnew of her intimacy with Pennell, she blought, on January 1, 1001, when she took, him in reply to a question that, she had been walking with Pennell. He told her she was very imprudent. She agreed with him then, and did now. with him then, and did now.

"Did you take some letters from that box and give them to him?"
"I unlocked it."
"Thow did you happen to unlock it?"
"He forced me to."
"He took me by the throat."
She did not remember whether at that time Pennell was the subject of a discussion with her husband. She did not know whether some of the letters read were in the box at that time. It was in January, 1903, when he choked her. She could not remember when she rented a box in a safe deposit company's vault. It was not about the time her husband had choked her, but recently when she received papers from detectives about Burdick. Her husband had not started the divorce proceedings. It was she who Burdlek. Her husband had not stated the divorce proceedings. It was she who wanted a divorce from him. She had no love for him, but did love Pennell, whom she expected to marry. He had a wife, but he expected they would be divorced. In reply to a question as to whether Mrs. Pennell had consented to a divorce. "Sometimes she did, and some

she said: "Sometimes she did, and some-times she did not."

Witness admitted, however, that she had never talked with Mrs. Pennell on the subject. Pennell had hired the de-tectives who shadowed her husband. Her husband sent her away in May, 1991, BREAKS HER PROMISE.

Mr. Contsworth showed her a letter written by her from Atlantic City May 27, 1901. In which she begged to be taken back, promising nover to see "Arthur" and that she would be a loving and true wife. In the letter she said she could not promise that Pennell would leave town, but declared he would do what she said. She admitted writing the letter, and said at that time she had hired no detec-

On one secasion Burdick wrote her that she could not be trusted. He said that if she loved Pennell as she said she did he did not blame her for what she did that if he loved a woman as she did Pennell he would de as she was doing. He declared that he loved her honestly long after she had ceased to love him, and that if she tried she might win back both his love and respect. He referred to the fact that Mrs. Burdick was wearing a ring given to her by Pennell, over her lawful wedding ring. Burdick declared that he had no faith in Pennell's promises and that she wished to be taken back until Pennell was freed from his wife.

In another letter Burdick wrote that he forgave his wife the wrong she had done him. In another Burdick declared he had determined to fight for the little honor she had left him, and after getting the divorce to fight for the children. Opinion regarding Mr. Bryan has changed a great deal within a month. It was not at first thought there was any possibility of his boiting in case the financial plank of the national platform did not wholly meet his views, but several of his recent utterances have led Democrats to believe that Mr. Bryan will not support the national ticket next year inness the platform contains practically the same features as those adopted at Chloago and Kansas City.

Mr. Bryan's following in the East is immeasurably weaker than it was three years ago, but he is still strong in several of the Western States. It is still true that he can defeat any Democratic candidar? for the presidency if he choose. It looks now as though he will choose to do so unless the man and the platform are exactly to his liking.

A number of citizens, and at least one rea number of citizens, and at least one real estate agent, are after the commissioners to confine undertaking establishments to certain defined limits. They urge that such an establishment always has the effect of depressing values in the locality where located. It is probably argued that depression in values is due to the depression in spirits which always results from contemplation of a mortuary establishment. in introducing the Virginia Executive at the Beta Theta Pi banquet in that city. At first the Governor hesitated, and said he had no disposition to talk through the newspapers, especially as he did not think members of the Legislature or any one else would seriously impute to him the use of any such language; but finally, in order to set the matter at rest once for all. His Excellency called upon his secretary for the press copy of his letter to Governor Beaver, which was shown a representative of The Times-Dispatch, and which was found to contain no reference to the Legislature except that it was difficult for him to leave while the body was in session.

The Govarnor then declared that Governor Beaver, in introducing him, had made some pleasant reference to the fact that the Virginia Legislature was in session, and notwithstanding this fact the Governor was on hand, but that he had not said that he (Governor Monague) had written him any such letter as had been reported through the press.

The Governor was sure that no one who knew him would believe that he had referred either by letter or otherwise in any light or offensive manner to the Legislature, and with this statement, he said, he was willing to let the matter rest. A number of members of the body called upon His Excellency yesterday and assured him that they did not think he had written to any one reflecting upon the law-makers, and that they knew there must be some mistake concerning the story. The portion of the story to which Governor Montague and his friends object is as follows:

"In introducing Governor Montague, of Virginia, ex-Governor Beaver said he had received several letters from the Governor asying that he was afraid he would not be uple to come, us he did not know what devilment the Legislature would be up to If he left them to their own devices."

Reports from Siberia.

(By Associated Press.)

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—Letters received here from Tomsk, West Siberia, describe the riots which occurred there March 3d. About seventy students, it appears, attended a local court in connection with a slander case, and on leaving were surrounded by the police. The students broke through the cordon and marched past the university shouting. "Down with the autocracy."

The numbers of those taking part in the demonstration were increased to some 3,000, and the situation became so alarming that the police barriended the bridge and summoned reinforcements. The Governor, Prince Vinsemsky, arrived on the scene and ordered the rioters to be attacked. Some of them were beaten and the whole body of rioters were finally overcome. Seventy-six were confined in the courtyard of the police station, where, it is claimed, they were much abused, Dr. Schlecter and a lawyer named Vozmesensky, who remonstrated with the police, were seriously injured. A patition to the president of the Tomsk Bar Association, signed by every lawyer in the city, corroborates this account and declares that the maltreatment of the prisoners was needless and willful.
